Progress in Louisiana

<http://www.progressinlouisiana.org/>

In honor of the second anniversary of Hurricanes Katrina and Rita, the state of Louisiana launched this Virtual Media Center to serve as a portal for journalists covering the state's recovery from the first and third most expensive natural disasters in the nation's history. Operating as the central online resource for news, the site will be continuously updated with recovery statistics, press releases, story ideas, and contact information. Members of the press can register to receive news alerts and press releases, identify spokespeople for issues related to recovery, and download documents and reports from governmental agencies, community groups, and other organizations.

RAND Gulf States Policy Institute

<http://www.rand.org/rgspi/>

The RAND Gulf States Policy Institute (RGSPI) was created in the wake of the 2005 hurricane season with the mission to provide a long-term capacity to develop informed public policy in Louisiana, Mississippi, and Alabama. The institute is engaged in policy research on the critical issues affecting the Gulf states: improving health care systems, financing public education, building affordable housing, strengthening the performance of public safety agencies, and weighing the costs and benefits of different levels of flood control, hurricane protection, and wetlands restoration. The site includes detailed project descriptions and several reports that have been published by RGSPI.

Social Science Research Council: Hurricane Katrina Research Hub
